Collier Is Tossed About On Trip Around The Horn

After a trying experience with strong gales and high seas, one of which flooded the room of G. Binder. the second engineer, dislocating his ankle and putting him out of commis-sion for many a day, the British steamer Katuna, Captain Arthur Lee, arrived this morning, after a passage of 63 days from Newport News, and cocked at the naval wharf, where she is discharging 7000 tons of coal for the Navy.

Chief Officer Herbert Elford stated this morning that no vessels of any description were sighted during the voyage. During the passage from Montevideo, which was the last port of call, to the latitude 40 south, the weather was very rough. It gradually moderated, however, and good weather was encountered the rest of the way. In passing the Straits of Magellan, the officers and crew saw a beautiful sight, glaciers sliding along with the current. In the early part of October the crew, consisting of Indian Hindoos, celebrated their Christmas day by feasting and dancing.
